

SINGULARITY UNIVERSITY

You think you have a great idea? You think it might solve the problem(s) of over a million people? Are you ready to prove it?

If so, apply to the Global Impact CEE competition and win a 10-week-long visit to the NASA Research Center in the Silicon Valley, USA.

Present us your idea, innovation or solution to any great problem that affects at least 1 million people and win a full-scholarship as early as this summer to Singularity University, founded by NASA and Google, located at the NASA Research Center in California, USA. Every year 80 carefully chosen students participate in the 10-week-long Graduate Studies Program (GSP), where they address the biggest challenges of the world together with the best minds of Silicon Valley.

This year, one place in the course is reserved for a Central-Eastern European talent. It can be YOU!

Enter the

2012 Global Impact Competition for CEE

and win the full scholarship to the 2012 GSP program at Singularity University worth 30.000 USD. You will also receive an Autodesk program of your choice for the value of 10.000 USD. To become a member of the Silicon Valley think-tank community, you need to present a persuasive plan about how you would improve the living standards of 1 million people in a 3-year period in the CEE&SEE region with the use of any exponentially developing technology. May it be health, education, security, energy or prosperity project, the goal is to make a big impact, to be economical and innovative.

Visit www.sucee.eu for further details and apply no later then April 2, 2012 on our website.

